

Gingival recessions and orthodontic treatment

Jan Streblov, M.D.

Gingival recessions are quite common in older as well as younger patients. What is their relation to orthodontic treatment and how to prevent them? What therapy should be applied if they occur and what can be expected from it?

In his lecture, the speaker will try to answer these questions based on his experience and provide the audience with guidelines for differential therapeutic consideration in patients affected by gingival recessions.