

Aesthetic interventions in the face from the perspective of a plastic surgeon

Roman Kufa, M.D.

In addition to the treatment of diseases, medicine nowadays also focuses on maintaining and improving physical appearance. Aesthetic procedures in the facial area are part of the training programs of not only plastic surgeons and dermatologists, but also dentists, maxillofacial surgeons and other disciplines.

They cover the full range of procedures from the completely minimally invasive, such as the application of botulinum toxin and filler materials, to complex surgical procedures, examples of which include rhinoplasty or face and neck lifts. For a successful outcome of the procedure, not only the correct technical execution but also the correct indication is always important. The submitted paper presents an overview of the most common aesthetic facial procedures in terms of both these aspects.
